Making Timber Durable.

An easy and simple method of rendering timber unusually durable, it not practically indes tructible, is of the greatest value to the agricultural community. Fence posts, sills of buildings and other timber exposed to influences which cause rapid decay, last but a few years under ordinary circumstances. It has long een known that lime is an effec tive preservative, acting in this way by coagulating the albumen in the cellular tissue of the timber. An easy method of preparing the timber has been applied practically by a French mining engineer. A pit was made in which the timber was placed quick-lime was scattered over it and then slaked with water After being exposed a few days to the action of the lime, the tim-ber was removed and used as this way has been in use for several years without the last of several years. several years without the least appearance of decay.
